Amber Henshaw continues her repeated and vicious personal assault on me in the newspapers since August (“Seek the truth,” Sun City Independent, Oct. 23, 2013).

She is not a Sun City homeowner and looks to be related to “a great sister,” RCSC General Manager Jan Ek, evidenced by her emotional defense of Mrs. Ek, for possibly having a conflict of interest because she owns five Sun City properties (“Questions are pathetic,” Sun City Independent, Oct. 16, 2013).

Ms. Henshaw’s “facts” are “misrepresentation of facts.” She does not have firsthand knowledge concerning me. She cannot attend meetings because she’s not a member. Yet, she claims to be concerned people might be “scammed” by donating to the “Anne Stewart Legal Fund,” which will bring RCSC before a judge for actually scamming Sun City homeowners with unequal assessments that fund multi-million-dollar projects without their permission.

RCSC President James Brasher’s “facts” are also “misrepresentations of fact.” RCSC did not have the cash in hand, as he claimed, to rebuild Fairway (“RCSC myths vs. fact,” Sun City Independent, Oct 16, 2013). RCSC called it, “pay as you go.” RCSC tore down Fairway, which required a vote of the members. Then, RCSC put it back in two phases as the money came in.

Mr. Brasher claims RCSC is above the Planned Communities Act, saying it was decided in “Appellate Court.” We don’t believe him. The court did give RCSC the property tax exemption given to planned communities because it was one, but now Mr. Brasher claims RCSC is not one? RCSC cannot have it both ways. RCSC needs the exemption, but with it comes open records and open meetings, etc.

Our fundraising is ongoing. Your contribution remains anonymous.

Contributing to the “Anne Stewart Legal Fund” will pursue truth and justice through the court. It’s worth every penny to determine the real facts. I am an unpaid volunteer advocate for homeowners’ rights and contributing money, as well. I am bringing the class action. The funds are used for attorney’s fees and court costs.

RCSC is on a public campaign to discredit me and block fundraising. The “Anne Stewart Legal Fund” is growing, and RCSC knows it.
